

Magic Mouse Toys Reviews

Ceci G.

09/13/2011

What a great place to find toys and feel a kid again!. Great staff and more than once I feel tempted to acquire more than one of the games. There is not pressure to look around and explore the different toys and board games they have.

In the end I fall for my temptation for Hello Kitty and ended up buying something :).

Cv B.

08/06/2011

Great location and stuff. I felt like a kid again. This is not your ToysRUs. It's way better. Here you will find toys your grandparents/parents might have played with. Classic boardgames, models, and even newer stuff. If I had room in my suitcase, I would have bought more but I bought something that I remember as a kid and didn't think it was still around. You remember those silly fortune telling fish. Well they were up by the register and I had to buy a pack for my kid. Of course I forgot about them until I saw them but to walk into a store and recognize something that brings back those memories makes it more special. No video games and they do not sell online. This is a rare gem.

Jeannette H.

07/14/2011

A truly, magical toy store. Whenever we are in Seattle, we make it a point to come here to explore, see and buy. So many amazing, fun and high quality items. I think each item is hand chosen b/c each and every item is good (unlike most big box toy stores where I ignore more than 1/2 the items in the store to find the good stuff). Everything here is good and they have such a large selection of the best of the classic toys as well as the new ones (Star Wars Legos). Oh, and everyone is very helpful here.

Rachel H.

06/17/2011

I have always like Magic Mouse Toys. I remember going here whenI was kid and getting able to play with toys. It's that way. The employees are always dinking around with toys, and, as the signs say, beware of flying monkeys. There is a toy where a monkey flies.

My purpose to go in this time was to find a puzzle book or something interesting to do to pass my time during jury duty. If you've ever been to jury duty, you know how boring the process is. The books I was looking for were in the game room on the lower level of the store. They had exactly what I was looking for. I bought two and checked out. The store clerks wished me luck during jury duty, too.

Deanna J.

04/24/2011

My husband and I discovered the store while we were driving through Pioneer Square. We were about Magic Mouse and decided to come back another day.

We both really enjoyed looking at the toys and games and books. Brought back a lot of memories from childhood. One of us would see a toy we played with or a book we used to love years ago and run over to show the other.

The puppets were pretty cool-the animals very realistic looking. There is also a Hello Kitty selection and travel edition board games.

I liked the little pig that "walked" around, he was cute.

Door says "No groups"-I can only imagine the story behind that sign. There is also a sale section on the lower floor.

John D.

03/21/2011

Great selection. Children must be accompanied by an adult at all times, so count adults and count children before you go.

John T.

03/19/2011

My GF really enjoyed the diversity and some of the more earlier toys from her childhood at the place. It's a cute store and worth walking into and looking at all the toys that either our parents play with or some of the toys we played with too much as kids and broke.

Samantha K.

03/03/2011

I'm in my twenties and I still love toy stores. Is there anything wrong with that?

I really hope not. This place is awesome. The boyfriend and I stopped by on our way to an underground tour. It took us a long time to explore through both floors, and I could have happily spent even more time there. There were a lot of great games and toys for adults (no, not like that!) as well as for kids. If you're looking for a wacky gift for someone, this is probably the place to go.

This store is definitely worth wandering through if you're in Pioneer Square. If you have kids, definitely shop here. If you don't, shop here anyway.

Erin B.

07/26/2011

A really nice, funky toy store right across from Pioneer Square. Fun for adults and kids alike.

alice n.

10/4/2009

This place is a riot! the first time i went a worker blew a butterfly in my face and scared me so terribly though it was a fun laugh:) Perfect place to buy a gift for game players, chess players, and CHILDREN! The place has so many beautiful dolls, kids toys, stuffed animals, and board games. All two stories are packed corner to corner with rolling hamsters, tricks, BOOKS, and miniature figurines. I bought one of the moving hamsters and I'm pleased to say it still entertains. My mom who hates boardgames and stuffed animals found things she enjoyed. WARNING: any parent who goes in MUST buy a toy..many kids come out crying that don't. What surprised me was the classic dolls and large variety of games. All the workers are happy and helpful! the place is truly..magical.

Les S.

9/29/2005

Never mind the kids! This is a fantastic place for anyone who loves fun! Creative minds wander in and get all sorts of ideas for themselves, and play with weird, unusual, non-brand type toys of all kinds. Modern versions of classic toys, and some things that are just entertaining. If you've ever thought "I need something cute and clever to put on top of my monitor at work to break up the tedium" then you need to come here.

Christine L.

8/6/2007

Having visited this store twice I would highly recommend. We spent about 30 mins in this store and I personally wasn't ready to leave. Great little finds. Toys from $1 to WAY up there! Pleasant staff, lots of toys for testing too!

Susie C.

6/18/2009

Flying monkeys? Back talking parrots? Puzzles, magnetics, dolls, games, animals stuffed, animals fluffed, squishy things, bumpy things, shiny things, bright and colorful, and Jesus you know what, even educational things. I went to Pioneer Square for my birthday to do the underground tour, and I wound up spending half the day in here playing. I was having so much fun playing with all the toys I thought I just might be 8 years old again. The only thing missing was mud and imaginary enemies. From the moment you walk in, its captivating. I wanted to become one with the store, or maybe at least be an employee. The funny thing is there is (or was) an old old man working there, probably in his 70's, just having a blast running around and chasing the children, playing with this and that. It made my heart swell. I'm so glad I have kids, it gives me a good reason (not that anybody needs one really) to come in and not feel like a complete tardo. AND.... after leaving here, there is a candy shop across the street with the must gimongoid candied apples ever. Mmmm, candy apples and toys!